Spartanburg Water's GM Presents at the American Water Works Association International Conference

Spartanburg Water officials announce that Sue Schneider, General Manager of Spartanburg Water, authored a technical paper "Making Your Mark: Engaging and Developing Employees Through Community Outreach Programs" that was selected for presentation at the American Water Works Association (AWWA) International Conference. The conference was held in Chicago, IL on June 20 – 24, 2010.

The American Water Works Association International Conference is an annual event for the 60,000 AWWA members plus associated professionals. Sessions and presenters are selected to discuss traditional programs and latest innovations to address today's problems and tomorrow's challenges to the water industry. Topics are presented in the professional program include the technical, managerial and operational subject areas. Ms. Schneider's presentation was made for the Management Track group attending the conference.

The presentation discusses the value of a corporate volunteer program in engaging and developing employees. Opportunities in corporate volunteer programs provide far reaching benefits for the employee, the company and the community through community volunteering, service project management and outreach leadership.

The selection for presentation of the technical paper authored by the Spartanburg Water General Manager for this international conference recognizes her technical and managerial expertise and highlights the continuous learning pursued by employees of Spartanburg Water demonstrating outstanding leadership and achievement in the Water Industry.
